1 Twitter will lay off as many as 336 employees, or about 8 percent of its workforce, as co-founder Jack Dorsey readies to revive growth in the microblogging service provider's user base. The layoffs, primarily in the company's engineering and product functions, come a week after Dorsey took over as permanent CEO. REUTERS

US ENERGY DEPT. THREAT

2 A U.S. Energy Department research laboratory in Oregon was evacuated Tuesday because of a bomb threat, a spokeswoman said. Employees from the National Energy Technology Laboratory in Albany, about 70 miles south of Portland, were ordered to leave the campus after the threat was received at about 8 a.m. local time, said lab spokeswoman Shelley Martin. She could not say whether any bomb had been found on the 10-acre campus. REUTERS are owned and controlled by the people who use them; profits are returned to the co-op members.

No wonder one billion people worldwide have joined a co-op!

YOU may not realize it, but cooperatives are all around! These are businesses owned by consumers, producers, farmers, workers, and more. One billion people worldwide have joined a co-op!

Because co-ops are owned and controlled by the people who use them, they are focused on member benefits rather than just on profits. Local control means that jobs and money from the co-op stay in the community.

BPD after 'Asl#' post on Twitter: We were hacked

The quickly deleted tweet was the work of hackers, Boston police said.

SPENCER BUELL
@MetroBOS
spencerbuell@metrobos

After a mysterious bit of chat room speak appeared on its Twitter feed, the BPD is claiming its account was "compromised."

The department tweeted "Asl#" to its more than 300,000 followers just after 9 p.m. Monday.

The phrase, shorthand for "age/sex/location," is one chat room users might recognize as an Internet old school (and sometimes flirtatious) way to learn background information about strangers online.

But two police representatives told Metro on Tuesday the tweet wasn't a case of an accidental tweet from a BPD handle-minder, but the work of a hacker.

"We know that's not the case," said Officer Rachel McGuire, a BPD spokeswoman. "We do believe our account was compromised and we've taken steps to prevent that from happening again."

New procedures include changing passwords, said Lt. Mike McCarthy, a department spokesman.

He said police have not opened an investigation into what happened.

The supposed hack is a cautionary tale for Twitter users, particularly ones operating handles as high-profile as BPD's, experts said.

"They should be happy it wasn't worse, plain and simple," said Robert Siciliano, Boston-based CEO of IDtheftsecurity.com. "Someone could have easily used the Boston Police Department Twitter feed and caused chaos."

Siciliano pointed to the 2013 hack of the Twitter account run by news organization the Associated Press. In that now-infamous case, a hacker's hoax tweet about an attack on the White House led to an online panic and stock market plunge.

The department, he said, needs to discern how the alleged breach happened: A bad Wi-Fi connection at a coffee shop? A malware infestation on an at-home PC?

Everyday Twitter users should take notice, too, said John Carroll, a mass communication professor at Boston University.

"We're finding more and more that almost no one is unhackable," Carroll told Metro.

As for the strange message that the alleged hack-

"They should be happy it wasn't worse, plain and simple."

ers decided to transmit to BPD's followers, Carroll said the tweet was unusual, but might actually fit the mold of past hacks.

"Sometimes the hack is there to deliver a specific message, so you want this to come to public attention and have some specific objective," he said. "There's another situation where you hack someone else to show that these people can be hacked. That, in itself, is the message."

As of noon on Wednesday, police had not tweeted anything about the alleged hack.

The department has been the target of online pranksters before.

In 2012, the department's site BPDnews.com was the target of a hack by the group Anonymous. The site suffered a similar breach in 2006.

Hernandez's next murder trial delayed until January: Judge

A judge on Tuesday agreed to delay until early next year the trial of former Patriots star Aaron Hernandez on charges of killing two men outside a Boston nightclub in 2012, according to court papers.

Hernandez, 25, is already serving a life sentence after a jury earlier this year found him guilty of murdering semi-professional football player Odin Lloyd in an industrial park in 2013.

Suffolk Superior Court Judge Jeffrey Locke agreed to delay the start of jury selection in the second trial of the former Patriots tight end until Jan. 19. Jury selection had previously been set to begin in early December. Prosecutors and the defense had both sought a delay in the trial in order to have more time to gather evidence and prepare arguments.

In next year's trial, Hernandez will face charges of killing Cape Verdean nationals Daniel de Abreu and Safiro Furtado. Prosecutors allege the incident started when de Abreu bumped into Hernandez in a nightclub, causing Hernandez to spill his drink. They say Hernandez later retrieved a gun from his vehicle and shot de Abreu and Furtado while they were stopped at a red light. Hernandez is charged with two counts of first-degree murder, three counts of armed assault with intent to murder and an additional count of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. He has pleaded not guilty to all charges. REUTERS

Medford cop in dash-cam video quits

The Medford detective who was caught on camera threatening to murder a driver over a traffic violation has stepped down.

Det. Stephen LeBert had come under intense scrutiny beginning in July after the dash camera footage surfaced, which showed him threatening to "blow a hole" in a man's head during an off-duty traffic stop.

He had been scheduled to appear at a disciplinary hearing Thursday, Oct. 15, to discuss the incident. LeBert chose to step down today, his lawyer Ken Anderson confirmed.

Anderson said the choice was a "long and very difficult" one for LeBert to make and said LeBert had not decided what his next steps would be.

Anderson lamented the way public attention turned on LeBert following the 30-year veteran's outburst.

"I think clearly he was unprofessional in his actions with this motorist, but I think the public right now has set the bar so high for what they expect police officers to do and there's no room at all for human frailty," he said. "We live in a world of second chances for everyone but police officers."

LeBert's history of temper flare-ups with community members has been well documented, including several complaints filed against him.

In 2012, a video showed LeBert with a grin on his face harassing a man trying to film an arrest in progress, rubbing his finger on the man's camera lens. SPENCER BUELL

Minimum wage still not enough: Workers

Workers were demanding a $15 minimum wage.

The $9 per hour wage Theresa Pennington earns working at a Dunkin' Donuts in Lowell is not enough to be able to afford an apartment of her own. Instead, she said, she lives with friends, but that means she is not able to keep custody of her 5-year-old daughter.

"The fast-food industry is one of the fastest growing in America and more and more of the workers look like me," Pennington said. "We are not teenagers looking for pocket change. We are women and men, we are working adults and we are trying to raise families."

Pennington was one of dozens of fast-food workers who rallied at the State House on Tuesday to urge lawmakers to boost the minimum wage to $15 an hour by 2018 and to support bills they said would make scheduling fairer for employees.

Jena Benson, an 18-year-old student at Bunker Hill Community College who works at Dunkin' Donuts, told the Joint Committee on Labor and Workforce Development that much of the money she earns is used to help pay the rent and bills at the apartment she shares with her mother.

"Making under $15 an hour makes it hard for me to do this," she told the committee. "I'm only 18 and I just started school. It is hard for me to balance school and the homework

I have to do when I can't really cut down on the hours I work because I still need money to be able to afford the things me and my mom need and try to save some at the end of the week."

Benson and Pennington spoke in favor of bills that would increase the minimum wage for employees at big-box retail stores and fast-food chains to $15 per hour by Jan. 1, 2018. They were joined by the Raise Up Massachusetts and Wage Action coalitions in pushing for workers' rights bills that also address scheduling and the tipped worker's minimum wage.

Just last year, the Legislature voted to raise the state's minimum wage to $11 an hour by 2017, with the second phased-in raise to $10 per hour set to take effect in January. 905

Brookline firefighter charged with beating homeless man over slow food order

A Brookline firefighter was arrested and charged with beating up a homeless man who took too long ordering food at Anna's Taqueria.

The fight took place Sunday night when the firefighter lost his patience while waiting in line at the Harvard Avenue eatery.

Joseph Ward, 37, of Dorches-

Anna's Taqueria (NICOLAUS CZARNECKI)

ter allegedly brawled with the victim outside the restaurant.

A witness told police Ward pushed, punched and kicked the victim before throwing food and a glass bottle at him while he was down.

Witnesses also said Ward mounted the man and continued to beat him after he was on the ground. Ward, a 10-year veteran, was not on duty at the time. The victim was treated for his injuries at Beth Israel Hospital.

Ward was arraigned Tuesday in Brookline District Court on assault and battery with a dangerous weapon charges. He was released without bail. METRO

Two Dorchester men busted on drug trafficking charges

Two men were due in court yesterday on drug trafficking charges after Boston cops found cocaine and a large amount of heroin and cash in a Dorchester home.

Police kicked in a door on Bowdoin Street at about 11:30 a.m. Friday and found two men in a house with 200 grams of heroin, 10 grams of cocaine and about $2,000 in cash, prosecutors said Tuesday.

Miguel Vasquez, 45, and Jonathan Rosario-Espinell, 26, were charged with trafficking a Class A substance. METRO

Amtrak to allow dogs and cats on NE trains

Commuting canine PROVIDED

Trains, they're not just for hobo dogs anymore.

Amtrak says small dogs and cats can come along for the ride on its trains from Boston to Virginia.

The rail carrier made the announcement following what it says was a successful pilot program in Illinois.

Spots for furry friends, however, are limited.

Animals must weigh less than 20 pounds, and there's a limit of five per train.

Reservations must be made 30 days in advance, and the animal must be kept in a carrier under the owner's seat.

There's also a fee. It costs $25 to bring your pet aboard.

Amtrak began letting pets ride the rails in Illinois in 2014.

More than 200 animals rode with their owners that year.

The rail service said the program did not receive a single complaint. METRO

Flight MH17 downed by Russian-built Buk missile, Dutch report

The report also seemed certain to strengthen calls within the airline industry for a review of how information is shared in conflict zones.

Malaysia Airlines Flight 17 was shot down over eastern Ukraine by a Russian-made Buk missile, the Dutch Safety Board concluded on Tuesday in its final report on the crash in July 2014 that killed all 298 people on board, most of them Dutch.

But the long-awaited findings of the board, which was not empowered to address questions of responsibility, did not point the finger at any group or party for launching the missile.

A bitter war was raging in eastern Ukraine between Russian-backed separatists and Ukrainian government forces when the aircraft was downed and, amid a huge international outcry, many Western experts and governments immediately blamed the rebels.

Russia for its part disputes that a Buk may have been used. Deputy Foreign Minister Sergei Ryabkov responded to the report by saying there had been "an obvious attempt to draw a biased conclusion, and carry out political orders," according to Russian news agencies.

"A 9N314M warhead detonated outside the airplane to the left side of the cockpit. This fits the kind of warhead installed in the Buk surface-to-air missile system."

Safety Board head Tjibbe Joutstra

The Safety Board report said that simulations of the missile's trajectory showed it came from somewhere in an area covering some 320 kilometers southeast of Grabovo, Ukraine — an area mostly controlled by separatists.

The makers of the Buk said their tests had shown that the aircraft could not have been hit by a missile fired from rebel-controlled territory.

Although the report did not assign blame, it is almost certain to further strain diplomatic ties between the Netherlands and its allies and Russia.

Dutch Prime Minister Mark Rutte urged Russia to cooperate fully with a separate criminal investigation that the Netherlands is leading, with participation from Malaysia, Australia, Ukraine and Belgium.

The White House called the report an "important milestone in the effort to hold accountable those responsible."

Four Baltimore cops' statements admissible in Gray death case

Gray, 25, suffered a spinal cord injury after being arrested in April and transported in a police van.

Statements given during an internal police investigation by four Baltimore officers charged in the death of a black man from an injury in police custody were made admissible in court on Tuesday.

Ruling against a defense motion, Baltimore City Circuit Court Judge Barry Williams found that Sgt. Alicia White, one of the six officers charged in the death of Freddie Gray, had spoken without duress to internal investigators probing Gray's death.

"Sgt. White had the opportunity to say no," Williams said during the first day of a two-day pretrial hearing.

Three of those charged — Lt. Brian Rice and Officers Garrett Miller and Edward Nero — also agreed to drop motions to suppress their statements.

Five of the six officers had made statements to police carrying out an internal investigation.

The only one to decline to give a statement, van driver Officer Caesar Goodson, faces the most serious charge: second-degree depraved-heart murder. He faces up to 30 years in prison if convicted.

White's attorney, Ivan Bates, had contended that she had not been advised of her rights before being questioned and had been compelled to speak to investigators.

Under questioning by Deputy State's Attorney Janice Bledsoe, Det. Michael Boyd said he had not told White of her rights before questioning her on April 12.

A second investigator, Det. Syreeta Teal, testified that White signed a form waiving the rights when she was questioned a few days later at police headquarters.

The rights include the Miranda warning to remain silent and state law that mandates protections for officers during misconduct investigations.

White and two other officers are charged with manslaughter, assault and misconduct.

The officers are facing individual trials, with starting dates scheduled from Nov. 20 to March. Williams also could hear arguments about what information prosecutors will have to share with the defense.

White and two of the other officers are black, and the remaining three are white.

Iraq using info from new intelligence center to bomb Islamic State militants

The new security apparatus based in Baghdad suggests the United States is losing clout in the Middle East, where it has been heavily invested for years.

Iraq has begun bombing Islamic State insurgents with help from a new intelligence center with staff from Russia, Iran and Syria, a senior parliamentary figure said on Tuesday about cooperation seen as a threat to U.S. interests in the region.

The center has been operational for about a week, and it provided intelligence for air strikes on a gathering of middle-level Islamic State figures. Hakim al Zamili, the head of parliament's defense and security committee, told Reuters.

Two weeks ago Russia started bombing anti-government rebels in neighboring Syria, including the ultra hardline Islamic State, to support its ally, President Bashar al-Assad, to the consternation of the West.

Iraqi officials, frustrated with the pace and depth of the U.S. military campaign against Islamic State, have said they will lean heavily on Washington's former Cold War rival Russia in the battle against the Sunni Muslim jihadists.

Two Russian one-star generals are stationed at the intelligence center in

"The idea is to formalize the relationship with Iran, Russia and Syria. We wanted a full-blown military alliance."

The Iraqi official

Baghdad, according to an Iraqi official who asked not to be named.

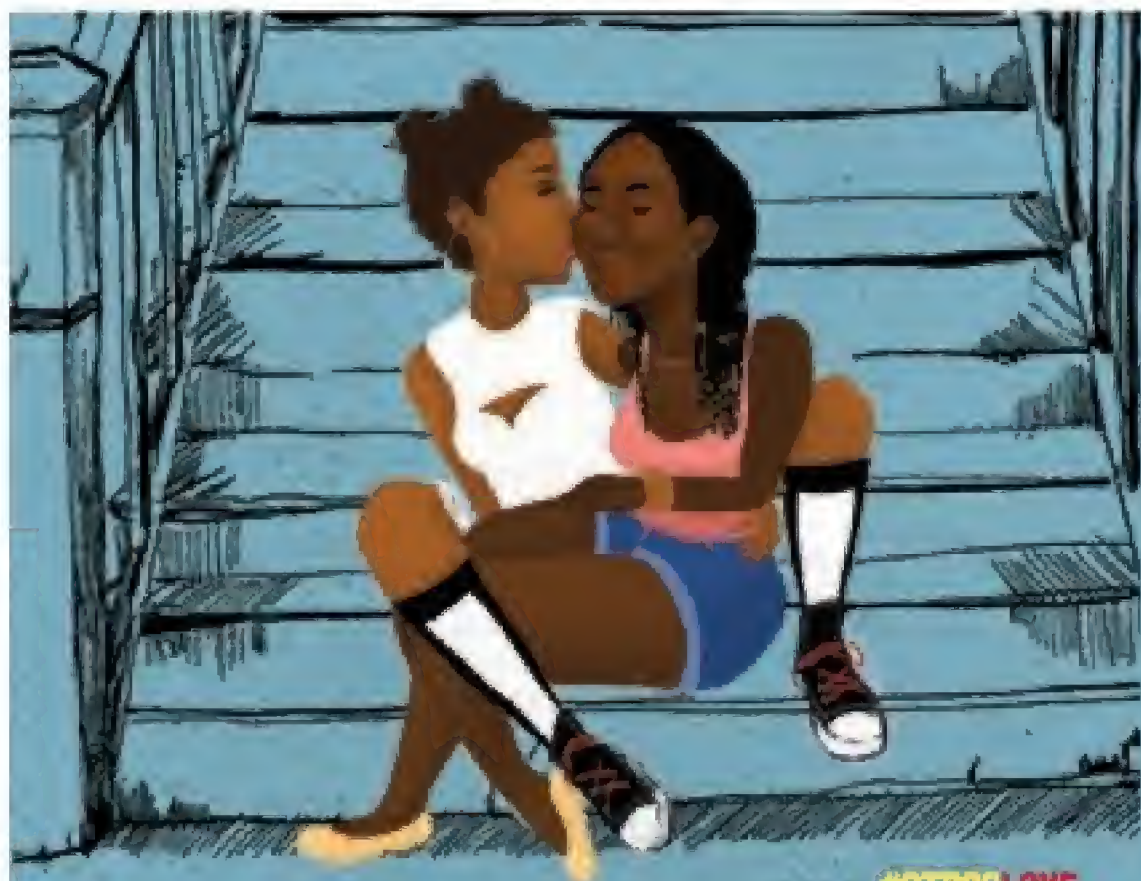

Zamili, a leading Shi'ite Muslim politician, said each of the four member countries has six members in the intelligence sharing and security cooperation cell, which holds meetings in Baghdad's fortified "Green Zone" that once housed the headquarters of the U.S. occupation.

Iran, a longtime Middle East adversary of the United States, already boasts deep influence in Iraq. Iranian military advisers help direct Baghdad's campaign against Islamic State, which aims to expand its self-proclaimed caliphate in the Middle East.

It is Russia's participation in the intelligence hub that is causing the most Western anxiety.

Washington, with a history of close security links with Baghdad, now worries the intelligence center may foster closer Russian-Iraqi ties, particularly with respect to operations against Islamist militants, a U.S. security official said. REUTERS

Islamic State urges jihad against Russians, Americans
Islamic State called on Muslims to launch a "holy war" against Russians and Americans over what it called their "crusaders' war" in the Middle East, an audio message distributed by supporters of the ultra hardline group said on Tuesday.

"Islamic youth everywhere, ignite jihad against the Russians and the Americans in their crusaders' war against Muslims," the speech by Islamic State spokesman Abu Mohammad al-Adnani said.

The United States and Russia are carrying separate airstrike campaigns in Syria, which they say are targeting Islamic State.

Washington says Moscow's campaign has mainly targeted other insurgent groups including those that have fought Islamic State, a charge Russia denies.

The United States is also carrying out airstrikes in Iraq, where Russia has also become separately involved. A senior Iraqi parliamentarian said on Tuesday that Russian officials were part of a new Iraq-based intelligence center with staff from Iran and Syria.

The audio message also confirmed the death of Abu Mutaz Qurashi, which the SITE monitoring service said was a reference to a senior Islamic State official killed in an airstrike in Iraq in August and referred to then as Fadhil Ahmad al-Hayali.

The White House said at the time that a U.S. air strike in Iraq had killed Hayali, whom it described as the second-in-command of the group which has seized swathes of territory in Syria and Iraq. REUTERS

Famous figures to waste

If you thought old electronics should be left to the landfill, think again: Brazilian artist Christian Pierini places various junk — as varied as computer motherboards, cables and vinyl records — in clever arrangements to create striking large portraits of some of the world's most famous personalities. Pierini says, "When I sought materials to make my own work, the stuff I had was junk from stereo systems, because I am a musician and work in a concert hall. With this material in hand I made a link to musical icons that I admire. The material that I used establishes a link between the planned obsolescence of discarded appliances, as well as also the obsolescence of the music industry." Pierini picks some characters that he finds relevant in the history of music and who have been gradually erased from memory. He says most of the new generations do not know the work of famous figures like Jimi Hendrix, John Lennon and so on; he wants to recover some lost cultural memory.

Rohrbach studied acting at London's Academy of Music and Dramatic Art and has guest starred on "Two and a Half Men" and "The New Normal." She was also the lead in the CW's "The P.E.T. Files."

2. She has brains as well as beauty. Rohrbach isn't "just another model." (Sorry.) She attended Georgetown University, majoring in theater. After graduation, she moved to L.A. to pursue her acting and modeling dreams.

3. She golfs. DiCaprio is an avid golfer, and so is Rohrbach. She actually was recruited to play Division One Women's Golf in college, so she might even be able to beat him, too. OK, we get it. She has it all.

Do not mess up Anne Hathaway's breakfast order

All that work Anne Hathaway has done to warm up her frosty image gets dumped down the drain just like that, thanks to one deliciously detailed report of her sending back her breakfast four — yes, four! — times. According to a TMZ spy with a great sense for both specifics and comic timing, Oscar-winner Hathaway was at Paramount last week shooting a Japanese commercial when she made what seemed at the time to be a pretty simple breakfast order: a poached egg, a toasted English muffin and some avocado. But the egg was too runny, so she sent it back. Then the muffin was too cold because it had sat there while the second egg was being poached, so she sent it back. Then the second egg was too cold because it had sat there while a new English muffin was toasted so... she sent it back. And then — and then! — everything was fine on the fourth attempt, except by then she'd changed her mind and decided she was more in the mood for a fried egg. So she sent it back. Oh man. Oh man, oh man, oh man. Honestly, I just feel bad for the caterer, who will obviously never poach an egg in this town again.

AM I NARCISSISTIC?

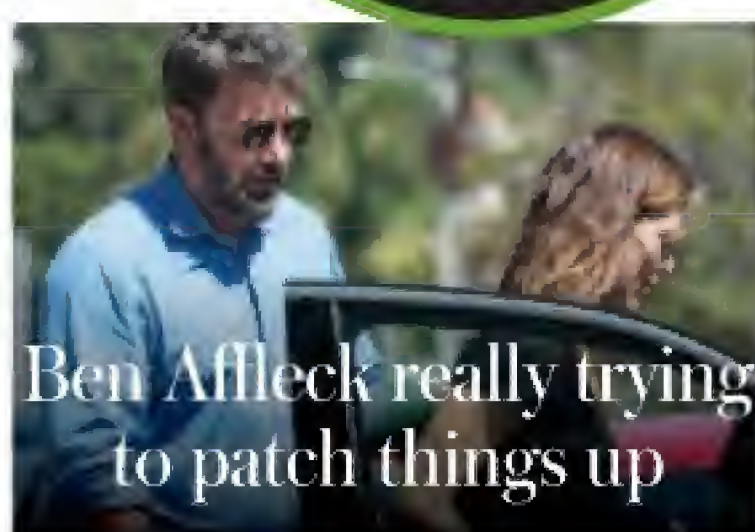

YOUTUBE

Am I a narcissist?

This is a rare moment of introspection from a professional YouTuber, as Anna Akana stops to ponder how much her chosen professional life has warped her outlook on the world. But even this supermeta, faux-deep exploration into the nature of Internet navel-gazing is in and of itself incredibly narcissistic, and I can't help feeling like Akana is just patting herself on the back for making the observations. Whoa. It's like we're caught in some sort of self-reflexive narcissism spiral. Oh, you know, YouTube.

Ben Affleck really trying to patch things up

Now that he's got that whole misguided affair with the nanny mess behind him, Ben Affleck is reportedly going out of his way to play nice with soon-to-be ex-wife Jennifer Garner. He's even started going to church with Garner and the kids — at Garner's insistence, according to E! News. "On the weekends they spend a lot of time together with outings to the farmers market and church. He is definitely going along with what she wants and doing the best he can to fix things," a source says. So how's that working out for him? "She has not forgiven him for things that have happened, but she's committed to keeping her children happy." Oh. Awkward. Still, keeping his family busy on Sundays means they're not watching "Project Greenlight," which can only help.

Daniel Craig would not hang out with James Bond

It looks like Daniel Craig is finally having some fun with this press tour for "Spectre," probably his last outing as James Bond. While sitting down with British talk show host Jonathan Ross for a chat, Craig ruminates on whether he'd want to socialize much with his special agent alter ego. "Would he be someone who you would avoid because he's so emotionally closed?" Ross asks, to which Craig replies, "That would be low down the list. The fact that he kills people three times a week" is a bigger issue. I mean, he has a point.

Katherine Waterston is staying in the big leagues

The actress was glad to be part of "Steve Jobs," which isn't your typical biography.

MATT PRIGGE
matt.prigge@metro.us

In the last year, mostly thanks to "Inherent Vice," Katherine Waterston has made the shift from struggling actor to an "it" girl. When we speak, she's in London shooting the "Harry Potter" spinoff "Fantastic Beasts and Where to Find Them." Right now, she's promoting another major release: "Steve Jobs," the Aaron Sorkin-penned story of the late Apple icon (played by Michael Fassbender) and the frenzied buildup to three of his most significant product launches. Waterston plays Chrisann Brennan, an ex who's justifiably furious with him, as he

In "Steve Jobs," in area theaters Friday, Katherine Waterston plays Chrisann Brennan, an ex of the Apple icon who fought for him to recognize the paternity of their daughter. FRANÇOIS DUMAMIEL doesn't want to claim paternity of their young daughter.

The move to major productions must be jarring. How have you dealt with it?

It's not really as much of a shift as I probably imagined when I would be fantasizing about having a proper career. [Laughs] You don't know what you're doing, and it all comes together at the last minute.

Sorkinese seems like it might be daunting.

The only part that was terrifying was when I was auditioning and I thought, "Am I anywhere near good enough to speak these words?" But actually, it's so much scarier to try and make poor writing sound good than it is to play around with really great dialogue. This is just like getting shot out of a cannon. You're supported by such a great structure. There's so much humor and intelligence. And a great rhythm. The writing does so much of your performing for you that you can relax, in a way. I would have thought, "Oh my God, I'll be a ball of nerves. I'll be so paranoid about getting that comma right or did I pause there? Did I cut him off in time?" But he writes the way people think.

This isn't a traditional biopic, so we don't see all of Brennan's history with Jobs. How do you handle suggesting a character's entire history only in fragments?

One thing I was thinking about was, how do I show the audience that this is an old dynamic, this is an old relationship? She's had some of these arguments before. I had to make sure it didn't feel fresh, that it felt like a worn-out relationship. It's so much more a portrait than a biopic. A lot of these biopics make us feel like we really know someone, and that's a dangerous thing to do to the public. Because it's never really true. You see these biopics where one dramatic thing happens after another, and this is why they became the artists they became, because of that one thing. No human I have ever met has ever had that experience — that one moment. They're a little irresponsible and deceptive.

A smile goes a long way

Danny Boyle seems an outside-the-box choice of director, as his films tend to be very heavy on visuals.

He's just a really great leader.

He kept the energy up on set. That sounds like a dumb thing, but it really makes a difference when you're freaking out about your own performance and trying to rise to the occasion, and you've been working eight, nine hours. He maintained the urgency, and he did that with a smile on his face.

Lilly Singh still can't believe her face is on a billboard

The YouTube star opens up about taking on touchy subjects and garnering more than 6 million subscribers.

AMANDA VALENTOVIC
letters@metro.us

YouTube vlogger Lilly Singh still hasn't processed her newfound fame, let alone that her picture is plastered on billboards and buses. "It's such an overwhelming feeling, it's kind of hard to take in," the 27-year-old says. "I feel like maybe two weeks from now I'll just be sitting somewhere random and it'll hit me."

Singh's YouTube channel, where she uses the alias ILSuperwomanII, has more than 6 million subscribers. She just finished a 30-city world tour of her live show, "A Trip to Unicorn Island," and she has two more shows this year. But she still manages to post a video every Monday and Thursday that aims to make her audience laugh while still covering the serious topics.

Taking on tough subjects

Negative comments about her Indian heritage in the past make seeing herself on a billboard that much more exciting. "The most special thing about the billboard is the fact that it's so fearlessly multicultural," Singh says.

Singh has been known to talk about subjects like racism and depression in her videos, in a positive way. "When you can laugh at something and have fun watching it, a message is easier to get across," says Singh. "I tend not to make my content 'Hey, I'm going to talk about racism or depression, now let me tell you why it's wrong.' I don't think that's as effective as intertwining messages with comedy."

Real life, online

To come up with ideas for her videos, Singh draws experience from what's going on in her life. "A lot of my content is genuinely things that happen throughout my day," she says. "I take it and exaggerate it in a way that's funny. My main goal is to make something that people can relate to. If it happened in my day, chances are it happened in someone else's day."

The relatable element also applies to the other huge project she has in the works — the documentary that covers her tour, "A Trip to Unicorn Island."

"It's not just the story of the tour — it's the story of me being thrown in a completely uncomfortable situation of having to learn something I have no idea about," Singh says. "It's this really interesting story of millennials taking charge and learning new things."

The documentary will be released next year. "It's coming out when I say it's perfect," jokes Singh. "But when it comes out, it is going to be the biggest, baddest, most awesome thing."

WIRE IMAGE

Lilly Singh's tips for getting started on YouTube

1. Be ready to work hard. "Don't think it's easy — know it's very hard. Everything I do is for my job, but I love it at the same time."
2. Ignore the trolls. "You definitely need a thick skin. People are behind a screen and will say whatever they want to say to you."
3. Just do it. "Starting is the hardest thing. Just start. The longer you wait, the more video is competing against your content."

Aries Joint ventures and other collaborations will be successful. It will be the perfect time to take your romantic relationship to the next level.

Taurus You will have to do some digging to get to the bottom of a personal dilemma. Don't assume to know what anyone else wants.

Gemini Minor problems at home will result in creative inspiration. You can make substantial improvements, but don't get too carried away.

Cancer Deal with small matters that seem to be constantly dragging you down. Once your schedule is clear, you will be able to find time for friends.

Leo Love and romance should be high on your agenda. Your appeal will bring favorable recognition and compliments. Make the most of your popularity.

Virgo Don't miss out, because your stress level is keeping you from enjoying your success. Material gains will be yours if you take advantage of a tip.

Libra Be a participant, not an observer. Put your networking skills into action whenever possible, and present what you have to offer.

Scorpio Someone you depend on will let you down. Don't blame yourself or be bitter; just be more cautious in the future.

Sagittarius You will be a magnet. Make the most of your popularity. New relationships will develop with people from diverse backgrounds.

Capricorn Business matters will be easier to handle than personal issues. Emotional turmoil will cloud your judgment.

Aquarius It's important to bolster your personal relationships. Strive to be a better partner, friend, colleague or confidant.

Pisces Keep your plans under wraps for now. Promises made to you will not be kept. A business or pleasure trip will bring unforeseen benefits. EUGENIA LAST

Price hike

But with that increased interest in the neighborhood comes rising prices. According to Werner, East Boston properties have seen a 6 percent increase in rent in the last year, compared to a 1 percent increase across all of Boston. That's bad news for lower-income residents of the neighborhood, who find themselves being displaced from their Eastie buildings. And with the onslaught of new residents flocking to the neighborhood, more and more luxury residential buildings continue to pop up. Portside at East Pier opened in 2014 with price tags starting at $2,025 per month for a studio. The building is drawing wealthy residents with luxury amenities like 24/7 front desk concierge service and a fully equipped fitness center with beautiful views of the water.

thought Eastie was far away from everything, but it's actually closer to everything that's important to me: family, work and friends," says Kelly. "My family is on the North Shore, so I'm closer to them. I could pay the same amount as I did in Brookline and have my commute be 45 minutes less."

The MBTA's Blue Line, which begins at Bowdoin station right where Beacon Hill and the Government Center area meet, is known as one of the more reliable lines in Boston's subway system. And for those who spend much of the workweek traveling, the short commute to Logan International Airport is another desirable aspect of moving to the neighborhood.

Raleigh Werner is co-founder of Jumpshell, a real estate startup that connects renters with a network of property agents in Boston.

"We've also seen a growing number of renters express interest in living in East Boston over the past four months," says Werner. "They're citing easy access to downtown without the exorbitant price tag of the North End, Downtown, Back Bay and Beacon Hill as a primary selling point."

buying a place in Eastie, where real estate is booming.

And then there are the people who don't even know where the neighborhood is.

"It's amusing to see people's reactions to hearing that I live here," says Amelia Sutton, 33. "It's crazy that somewhere so close to downtown is basically unknown to most people. You get one of two responses: 'Wait, like near the airport?' or 'That's a really up-and-coming neighborhood! I've been hearing that for seven years.'"

Sutton, who works in Boston as a publicist, came to East Boston in 2012 in search of a one-bedroom for under $2,000. "It was the only place that wasn't a 40-plus-minute ride away from downtown," she says.

The commute into downtown is one of the biggest motivators bringing young professionals through the tunnel to East Boston, particularly in neighborhoods like Jeffries Point. Kelly Smith, 30, just moved to East Boston on Sept. 1 from the edge of Chestnut Hill. Like many Bostonians who rarely made their way through the tunnel, Eastie felt like a world away.

"I used to be one of those people who

Halloween decor tricks and treats

Plastic spiders not for you? Keep things spooky-chic with these expert tips.

MONICA WEYMOUTH
letters@metro.us

Believe us when we say that we love a good over-the-top Halloween display. To the guy who turned his lawn into a zombie graveyard, we salute you. To the woman who scaled skeletons up the side of her brownstone, we're impressed. But let's say you want to acknowledge the holiday in a more subtle way. That can be tricky during the month of fake spiderwebs and cardboard tombstones, so we hit up the experts. Here are their best spooky-chic tips for the season.

Punch up your pumpkins

With all due respect to the classic jack-o'-lantern, perhaps it's time to give him a little makeover. Ruthie Tabone of Refashionably Late recommends dropping the carving knife and instead opting for a chic, neutral paint job. "I really love the black, white and gold combo right now," she says. For a little bling, try adding metallic studs.

Think moody, not spooky

Who's up for a creepy cocktail? POTTERY BARN

Cheap hack

There's no sense breaking the bank for seasonal decorations. The easiest way to upgrade your look for less? Spray paint. "You can transfer a cheap dollar-store item into a beautiful decoration with the right spray painted finish," says Tabone.

Incorporate natural elements, like dried hydrangea. LINDA BRADEN

You can channel the spirit of the season without the skulls and crossbones. "My favorite sophisticated way to nod at Halloween right now is to use large photos and artwork of moody, dark florals," says Julia Konya, a lifestyle and design blogger at Cuckoo4Design. "Or you could just create your own arrangement," she adds. "I'm really drawn to dark, mysterious creations that use lots of black, maroon and dark greens."

Go natural

As a general rule, if nature made it, it'll never look dated or tacky. "Pumpkins, acorns and dried hydrangeas add a nice touch of fall and Halloween indoors," says Linda Braden, the blogger behind It All Started with Paint. "I'm partial to the little pumpkins in white that I find at the grocery store; pepper them around the house on bookshelves and mantels and in wire baskets."

Flip the color story

There's nothing wrong with orange — but does it fit in with your year-round decor? If not, skip it. "This year, I'm into the idea of making Halloween work with the colors of my home," says Braden. "So instead of using orange as a contrast to my navy and white decor, I'm creating Halloween and fall decorations that complement it. I'm drawn to white, burlap and jute."

Lowly Bruins get out of town

It's still early, but the Bruins look like one of the worst teams in the NHL.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

It's hard to imagine the Bruins getting off to a worse start to a season than what just transpired over a horrific long weekend at TD Garden.

Where to begin? They were blown out in all three games, one of their best players (Brad Marchand) suffered a concussion, goaltender Tuukka Rask looked nothing like himself, one of their new defensemen — Matt Irwin — was so bad that in the first two games he was sent to Providence, and the B's allowed the most goals (16) in the first three games of a Boston campaign since 1965.

Zdeno Chara and the Bruins will be at Colorado Wednesday night. GETTY IMAGES

Considering how ugly things got against Winnipeg (a 6-2 opening-night loss), Montreal (a 4-2 loss on Saturday) and the 6-3 loss to the Lightning on Monday, it can only be a good thing for the Bruins (0-3) to get out of town for the rest of the week.

They are at Colorado (1-1-0) on Wednesday (10 p.m., NESN) before visiting Arizona (2-0-0) on Saturday (10 p.m., NESN). Those clubs are off to good starts but both aren't expected to make the playoffs in the rugged Western Conference. Starting with three games at home should have been a positive thing for the B's, but truth be told, they did play two of the best teams in the Eastern Conference along with a team that made the playoffs last season in the West.

Not every club has played three games so far, but Boston has allowed the most goals in the league. It shows how bad their defense is when they managed to score three power-play goals against Tampa Bay but still got doubled up. Head coach Claude Julien, who is probably fighting for his job, is clearly fed up with his defensemen being stuck out of position, coughing up turnovers in dangerous areas and giving up way too many odd-man rushes.

"Defense used to be our strength and now it's our weakness," he admitted after the loss to the Lightning.

One positive to come out of the latest debacle is that captain Zdeno Chara made his first appearance of the season and looked OK (21:27 ice time, -2, 3 shots on goal, 1 giveaway and 1 blocked shot).

The players know that, ultimately, they are the ones who are going to have to turn things around.

"Of course, the effort is there," explained center Patrice Bergeron. "I'm really surprised by this start; we have a lot of games ahead of us but we need to fix this quickly."

NFL power rankings | by Luke Miller

No. 1

Patriots
(4-0)

The Pats' victory over the Cowboys was their seventh straight "W," dating back to last season. New England has had a bit of luck facing teams without their stars (Le'Veon Bell in Week 1, Tony Romo last Sunday), but the Pats haven't taken their foot off the pedal. This Sunday's game against the Colts is sure to be a bloodbath as New England has 50 years worth of ugly press to read coming out of Indianapolis due to Deflategate.

No. 2

Packers
(5-0)

Aaron Rodgers' interception streak ended, but the real story Sunday was Green Bay's defense, which pressured Nick Foles into four picks. Stud QBs and ball-hawking defenses are pretty good come playoff time.

No. 3

Bengals
(5-0)

Maybe this isn't the same ol' Bengals. Give Cincy credit for refusing to fold and putting up a monster fourth quarter against a Seattle defense that had been bullying them all day long.

No. 4

Cardinals
(4-1)

Arizona bounced back well from its first defeat of the season by dispatching the Lions in much the same fashion they'd won their first three. Also encouraging: the return of Andre Ellington.

No. 5

Broncos
(5-0)

The defense is playing better than any in football, but questions about the offense are going to follow them throughout the season as long as Peyton Manning performs below typical Peyton Manning standards.

No. 6

Falcons
(5-0)

So far this season, we've all looked to Atlanta and said we believe in the offense, but what about the defense? Last Sunday was their week. Robert Alford's overtime pick got them the win.

No. 7

Panthers
(4-0)

The Seahawks have to be a favorite at home this weekend, right? Maybe not. The Panthers have been the team showing the just-win mentality that characterized Seattle teams of the past.

No. 8

Jets
(3-1)

If they can stay focused on the here and now against the Redskins this weekend, the Jets will be 4-1 heading into what would be a monster Week 7 showdown in Foxboro against the hated Patriots.

No. 9

Steelers
(3-2)

It took all game, but when Mike Vick and the rest of the Steelers' offense clicked it was beautiful. They have gotten through the first two weeks without Big Ben OK.

No. 10

Vikings
(2-2)

The Vikings get two weeks to prep for the Chiefs. Jamaal Charles has torn his ACL, putting a damper on what would have been a mega-showdown between he and Adrian Peterson.

Are you interested in helping evaluate an investigational medication for people with long-lasting or persistent pain following shingles, also known as post herpetic neuralgia (PHN)?

Local doctors are conducting a new clinical research study evaluating the safety and effectiveness of an investigational topical ointment for people with chronic PHN pain.

In this study, they want to evaluate the investigational ointment to see if it helps relieve pain when it is applied to the affected area twice a day for 4 weeks.

To pre-qualify for this study, you must:

- Be 18 years of age or older
- Have chronic PHN (pain present for more than 6 months and less than 6 years)
- Not have PHN that affects your face

All study-related visits, tests, and medications will be provided to you at no cost. In addition, reimbursement for study-related time and travel may be provided if needed.

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage given by Christine Martinez to Nuestra Commercial Markets Fund LLC, dated January 19, 2007 and recorded with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds at Book 41165, Page 55, of which the Mortgage is the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said Mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing the same will be sold at Public Auction at 10:00 AM on November 4, 2015 at 3141 Washington Street, Unit C-A, Boston (Jamaica Plain, MA, all and singular the premises described in said Mortgage, to wit:

Unit C-A of the Condominium known as 3141 Washington Street Condominium established by Master Deed dated January 19, 2007 and recorded herewith. The post office address of the Condominium is 3141 Washington Street, Jamaica Plain, Suffolk County, Massachusetts 02130. The land is described in the Master Deed. This Deed and the Subject Unit are subject to the provisions of M.G.L. Chapter 183A. The Unit is conveyed together with an undivided 22% interest in the common areas and facilities of the Condominium. The Subject Unit is shown on the master Plans of the Condominium filed in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds as set forth hereinabove, and on the Unit Plan of the Subject Unit, which is attached hereto and the verified statement of a registered architect in the form required by M.G.L. Chapter 183, Section 8 and it is affixed to said Master Plan and Unit Plan. The Subject Unit shall be used only for commercial purposes as permitted from time to time by Applicable provisions of the Boston City Ordinances, subject to such special permits, conditional use permits and variances as may be in force from time to time, and for those purposes permitted as accessory uses thereto within the meaning of the then current Boston City Ordinance with respect to zoning. The Subject Unit is hereby conveyed together with 1, an easement for the exclusive use of the basement storage area designated on the Master Deed for the exclusive use of Unit C-A; 2, an easement, exclusive in common with the owner of Unit C-B, to use the first floor rear foyer and bathroom, and front doorway entrance area, all as shown on the Master Deed Plans; and 3, an easement, exclusive in common with the owner of Unit C-B, to use the area designated for the Subject Unit's exclusive use on the first floor rear deck as the location of and for the operation of an air conditioning compressor serving Unit C-A and Unit C-B, together with the right to run, use and maintain conduits, pipes, cables and other normal electrical and plumbing apparatuses in connection therewith. The Unit is hereby conveyed together with and subject to all rights, restrictions, easements, obligations, provisions, agreements, building limitations, zoning regulations, public utility and telephone easements, and all other matters set forth or referred to in the Master Deed for title to said premises see deed from O&O Real Estate Holding, LLC of even date and recorded herewith.

The premises are to be sold subject to and with the benefit of all easements, restrictions, building and zoning laws, laws, attorneys fees and costs pursuant to M.G.L.Ch.183A, unpaid taxes, tax liens, water bills, municipal fees and assessments, rights of tenants and parties in possession.

TERMS OF SALE:

A deposit of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS AND 00 CENTS ($5,000.00) in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check, or money order will be required to be delivered at or before the time the bid is offered. The successful bidder will be required to execute a Foreclosure Sale Agreement immediately after the close of the bidding. The balance of the purchase price shall be paid within thirty (30) days from the sale date in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check, or other check satisfactory to Mortgagee's attorney. The Mortgagee reserves the right to bid at the sale, to reject any and all bids, to continue the sale and to amend the terms of the sale by written or oral announcement made before or during the foreclosure sale. If the sale is set aside for any reason, the Purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit paid. The purchaser shall have no further recourse against the Mortgagee, the Mortgagee or the Mortgagee's attorney. The description of the premises contained in said mortgage shall control in the event of an error in this publication.

TIME WILL BE OF THE ESSENCE.
